

Join me at “nancy manocherian’s the cell” on Feb. 28 for a “free admission” Season Opening Fundraiser for a new six concert series called “New Yorkers: Together in Story and Song.” (Please see the bottom of this letter for ticket and subscriber information.)

The goal of the series is to support a diverse and extremely talented collection of artists from around the world. On February 28th at 7:30pm, you can meet and hear three of the artists, vocalist Niamh Hyland, guitarist Yuri Juarez and his AfroPeruvian band and pianist Harriet Stubbs who will present a sampling of three of this season’s six shows. Other performers who will be appearing during the season are Miho Hazama, JP Jofre, Annette Homann, and Alexander Wu.

Four years ago I set a vision into motion, which was to create a nonprofit organization that would support both the arts and artists. I invited Niamh Hyland, business executive, attorney and highly talented musician in her own right to join forces with me. The result: Artists Without Walls.

Artists Without Walls provides artists with something truly unique—a stage in the center of the universe. Month after month the lights come up at “the cell” with a consistently full house, where remarkable artists have the opportunity to showcase their talent.

My new goal is to take the Artists Without Walls’ concept to the next level. To this end I have created a production company, Charles R. Hale Productions, to promote today’s emerging artists and to give them more than just a single stage. I want to help them to realize their full potential as musicians so they can write their pages in this city’s long history of creating art.

New York City has always been a melting pot and a mecca for aspiring artists. The arts, particularly music, are also a cultural melting pot and a vital component of human civilization, shared between cultures for millennia.

I can’t do this without your help. Your support of the arts is the strength that will carry us through troubled times and help to unite the world.

Join the musicians and me on February 28 at 7:30 pm at the cell—the doors and the bar open at 6:45. Please reply to this email to RSVP. I will reserve your seat.

Sincerely,

Charles R. Hale
